About the Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence

www.ei.yale.edu

Emotions matter in schools

- For leaders, emotions drive the effectiveness of all daily interactions, with colleagues, parents, and students, as well as school climate and culture, especially the daily planned and unplanned interactions with colleagues, parents, and students.
- For teachers, emotions drive their effectiveness, including the climates they create in their classrooms and student learning.
- For students, emotions drive their ability to learn, make effective decisions, build relationships, and perform their best academically.

We will provide your leadership team with the knowledge, skills, and opportunities to build emotional intelligence—the skills of recognizing, understanding, labeling, expressing, and regulating emotion—in all stakeholders in your schools.

Join a national movement to build Emotionally Intelligent Schools

Since 2005, Seedlings Foundation has provided professional development, ongoing support and resources to Connecticut educators from diverse school environments. In a supportive and actively engaging setting, educators forge ongoing relationships and community connections and leave with tools to support them throughout their careers.
