

What leadership skills do you have?

How do you become the leader you want to be?

Are you prepared for pitfalls and derailments?

Has anyone ever said you have "potential"?

DISCOVER, LEAD! 2015

This conference will help you answer these questions and think about a few more. You will engage with uniquely talented presenters in exercises designed to uncover abilities and explore your vision of self and the possibilities for your future.

DISCOVER, LEAD 2015

Dis•cov'er: (verb) To obtain knowledge through observation, search or study. To be the first to find. To reveal or expose.

Lead: (verb) To show the way by going in advance. To guide or direct in a course. To tend toward a goal or result.

Personal development requires both actions. We must engage in situations and with people who will expand our knowledge and reveal our mindset, our skills and new information. In turn, we then must design and direct a course toward our highest level of development and desired achievements. This conference will be an introduction to this process.
