Transforming Schools: Building Capacity

Keynote Speaker: Phil Schlechty

Tuesday, June 29, 2010 – Day Session

Building Capacity

Phil Schlechty

Phil Schlechty comes out of a background as fundamental as an Ohio farm and as lofty as The Ohio State University. He is an exceptional speaker, thinker, writer, and leader. He has deep, abiding passions for equity, excellence, the public schools, and American democracy.

His unique talent lies in the ability to draw upon such diverse sources of inspiration and to develop coherence among them around issues of kids, schools, communities, and leadership.

Phil is a storyteller, and his stories (often quite funny) are usually metaphorical, linked to some important point about why, and how, schools might be transformed. He bridges disciplines, cultures, and points of view—comfortably and with keen insight. He teaches us all how to do that. He leads by example, and by asking "what if" questions.

ROLES AND RELATIONSHIPS IN TRANSFORMING SCHOOLS

Timothy Breslin, Principal, Farmington High School

Tim Breslin, who is principal of Farmington High School and was Connecticut's 2009 High School Principal of the Year, has been a school administrator for thirty-three years. He first heard Phil Schlechty speak twenty-five years ago and has since that time been a believer in Schlechty's assertion that providing students with challenging, engaging work is the most effective way to improve student learning. In his presentation Tim will discuss the critical role played by school climate in transforming schools to the point where the focus is on providing students with work that their parents, the community, and the students themselves think is satisfying and worthwhile.

TRANSFORMING SCHOOLS: THE SCHOOL CHANGE CAMPAIGN IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven Public Schools

The New Haven Public Schools have established an ambitious plan to transform their schools. The city and the school district have articulated the objectives for their reform initiatives.

These include:

- Move from incremental to exponential progress
- Close the achievement gap with the State in 5 years-which will require roughly doubling the performance of minority students at the high school level.
- Cut the drop-out rate in half
- Ensure that every graduating student has the academic ability and the financial resources to attend and succeed in college
- Be recognized as the best urban district in the country

Representatives from New Haven will present their plans and accomplishments to date in meeting their goals.

Summer Leadership Institute

Institute Theme

Due to the overwhelming success of the previous Summer Institutes, the Connecticut Association of Schools (CAS), with support from the Connecticut State Department of Education (CSDE), the Connecticut Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development (CASCD), and the State Education Resource Center (SERC), is again sponsoring the 2010 Summer Leadership Institute theme : Transforming Schools: Building Capacity.

The Institute will focus on the urgency for school leaders to effect changes in their schools in today's climate of higher expectations, state and federal initiatives, 21st century learning, and diminishing resources. The reform literature puts clear emphasis on the important role of school administrators for improvements in teaching and learning. The Institute will engage participants in expanding their own knowledge and skills to lead their school communities now and into the future. It will provide participants with personal and professional strategies to maximize their effectiveness.

Come and enjoy two days with your Connecticut colleagues as together you explore your role in transforming education in the state.

Registration Information

Register on line at www.casciac.org/registration. The closing date for submitting registrations is May 28, 2010, but early registration is encouraged. Participation is limited to 120 and the Institute has "sold out" the past two years.
