

Supporting Your Staff in the Development of Quality IEPs

Training for school leaders

Are you familiar with the ins and outs of the new IEP document?

School leaders play a critical role in supporting special education teachers and staff in the development and implementation of quality IEPs that will maximize educational benefits for students with disabilities.

CAS, in collaboration with the State Education Resource Center, is hosting three IEP Quality Trainings for K-12 principals and assistant principals. These 2-day trainings are designed to deepen school leaders' understanding of the fundamental components of the new IEP. All sessions will be facilitated by expert trainers from SERC and members of the CAS staff.

Register for an upcoming training to sharpen your knowledge of the new IEP requirements, inform your facilitation of PPT meetings and better support your teachers and staff in the development of effective IEP goals and objectives for students receiving special education and related services.
