

PLANNING AHEAD:

WHAT EDUCATORS NEED TO KNOW ABOUT TEACHER RETIREMENT BOARD (TRB)

VIRTUAL
Sept. 28, 2026
3:00 PM

Understanding the Connecticut Teachers' Retirement System is an important part of long-term financial planning for every educator. This workshop provides a practical overview of TRB benefits, including retirement eligibility, service credit, payment plan options, supplemental and voluntary accounts, health insurance, cost-of-living adjustments, post-retirement employment, and the retirement filing process.

Designed for educators at any stage of their careers, the session will help participants understand how retirement decisions made today can affect future benefits and provide guidance for planning a successful transition to retirement when the time comes.

Presenter: Bill Sudol

Before retiring in 2003, Bill Sudol served as Administrator of the Connecticut Teachers' Retirement Board (CTRB), following 17 years as Assistant Administrator. During his 33-year career with CTRB, which began in 1970 after graduating from Northeastern University, he held a variety of professional roles and personally counseled thousands of teachers on retirement planning.

Bill has been recognized by the Connecticut Education Association (CEA), the Connecticut Association of Public School Superintendents (CAPSS), and the Association of Retired Teachers of Connecticut (ARTC) for his service to educators. He has presented numerous retirement workshops and frequently testified before the Connecticut Legislature in support of improving benefits for active and retired teachers.

Today, Bill continues to share his expertise through personalized retirement consulting services for teachers and administrators considering retirement.
