

Complementary Observers: Capturing the Reality and Lessons from the Field

Educator evaluation is providing many opportunities for professional learning throughout the structure and process. Schools in Connecticut have been redesigning evaluation plan implementation strategies that provide benefits for both teachers and administrators.

The session will begin with a panel of teacher and administrator representatives from 4 Connecticut school districts and 1 out of state, who have used a range of approaches using complementary observers as part of their district accountability and support system.

They will each speak about:

- Criteria for selecting their complementary observers
- Requirements within the role
- Collaborative agreements with stakeholders
- Type of observations, feedback and how teachers make use of the data

Following the panel presentations, a facilitator will guide the participants through a question and answer session that will reveal lessons learned and how these schools will be proceeding!

This no-cost support is being provided by Connecticut State Department of Education funding
