- Opportunity to get support and feedback on actual decision making challenges from your school

Note: There may be some reading preparation before the first session.

PRESENTER KELLY LYMAN

Kelly Lyman has a long career in Connecticut public schools where she served in leadership positions for nearly 30 years. She retired in 2022 after serving seven years as superintendent in Mansfield, CT. In her work she focused on systemic improvement efforts designed to develop in students the knowledge, skills, and understandings necessary for success in a rapidly changing global environment. Kelly has served on boards and commissions for several state, national, and international organizations, and currently serves as coordinator of the Executive Leadership Program at the University of Connecticut preparing school administrators for the role of superintendent. She was awarded the Emeritus Award for outstanding service from the Connecticut Association of Public School Superintendents in 2022.
