Never been to a leadership conference? Not even sure you're a leader? Ever been told you have potential? This is the conference for you! You have leadership abilities, everyone does. You have potential for greatness, to achieve your dreams, to dream big and to make a difference.

Attending this conference will:

- connect you to emerging student leaders from high schools across the state
- initiate a life-long process of leadership skill and personal development
- inspire you to explore new ways of being and new opportunities

Too often "leadership" has been confined to a small segment of our community that exhibits certain identified "leadership behaviors. Research shows that not only are there multiple intelligences but there are also multiple styles of leadership, communication and problem solving. We need all of these diverse skill sets, styles and life experiences activity engaged in our schools, communities and the world. The Connecticut Association of Schools and the Student Advisory Board is committed to the development of all student leaders, those identified as such or not.

This conference is a student led initiative to broaden the reach of leadership training programs to new and under-represented students.
