Student-centered learning requires Student Voices.

CAPSS and CAS want to hear how your middle and high school students would transform education.

Beginning January 2nd, we invite students from Connecticut to lend their voices to the educational debate. How can they thrive in the classroom? What changes would make it easier for them to learn and grow?

StudentVoice in Education Reform is an opportunity to share those ideas through creative and compelling videos that make a case for educational transformation. Gift Cards and Scholarships will be awarded to first, second and third place winners in the middle and high school divisions. To learn more, visit: www.capss.org and search for Student Voice in Education Reform or visit www.casciac.org/go?534. Deadline for video submissions is April 1, 2013.
